

XBRL in Government and Industry

Presented by XBRL-US
19 July 2005, Washington D.C.

How can you benefit from the transformation of business reporting?

The costs and risks of business reporting in corporations have never been higher, and the need to streamline government never more compelling!

You are invited to attend a free public presentation on the use and benefits of XBRL in government and industry to be held in Washington DC on 19 July 2005. At this event you will:

- LEARN from expert speakers from the FDIC, the SEC, Microsoft, Morgan Stanley, FEI, AICPA, the National Investor Relations Institute, and other premier organizations how they have used XBRL to their advantage, and how you can benefit.
- LEARN from experts in the development and implementation of XBRL solutions how XBRL could benefit your organization.

XBRL is the XML-based language used to describe business reporting information. XBRL can be used for quarterly and annual financial reports and regulatory filings as well as for internal financial reporting. Consumers of XBRL include internal management, external regulatory agencies, analysts and investors, and others who need to receive financial information in a timely manner and with more detail and possibility of reuse and automated processing than is currently possible using traditional paper-based or electronic reporting methods.

The theme of the meeting will be "XBRL in Government and Industry". The program will start with a general plenary session with speakers from US government agencies discussing their successes in using XBRL for regulatory filings. The plenary will be followed by two parallel tracks covering "XBRL in use in Government: Opportunities and Challenges" and "XBRL in use in Corporate Reporting: Opportunities and Challenges".

The morning session of the Government track will cover current XBRL projects and implementations in federal and state/local government in the US and internationally. The afternoon presentations will focus on discussion of potential applications, hurdles to adoption, and an assessment of the readiness of government agencies to transform their own reporting processes.

The Corporate/Industry track will start with a discussion of the SEC Voluntary Filing Program, with the afternoon session looking at the impact of streamlining communication throughout the business reporting supply chain. Speakers will present their visions of better reporting and perspectives on XBRL as an enabler for improved market information.

This event is organized by XBRL-US, the US jurisdiction of the XBRL International consortium, an organization with over 300 member organizations worldwide who are working to develop and promote the adoption of XBRL. The meeting will be hosted by the FDIC.

Conference and Hotel Location

The meeting will be held at the FDIC's L. William Seidman Center, 3501 Fairfax Drive, Arlington, VA 22226. Please note that wireless LAN will be available in the meeting rooms.

For those flying in, Washington Reagan National (DCA) is the closest airport and is connected via the Metro (subway) to the conference center. Dulles (IAD) is close enough for a taxi, and Baltimore-Washington (BWI) is close enough if you plan on getting a rental car.

Due to construction, parking is available only to those staying at the conference center hotel, so attendees are encouraged to take the Metro. From anywhere in the Washington DC metro area, take the Orange Metro Line to the Virginia Square-GMU station. (From Reagan National airport, take the Blue Line to the Rosslyn station and transfer to the Orange Line going in the direction of Vienna.)

The Seidman Center has an attached hotel. We have reserved a block of rooms at this facility; use the attached form when making your reservation to receive the special rate of $110.00/night. Please register to attend the conference and to make hotel reservations using the attached forms.

The hotel entrance is on 1001 N. Monroe Street, Arlington, VA. 22226. The hotel front desk number is (703) 516-4630; fax is (703) 516-1034.

Other local hotels within a mile of the Seidman Conference Center are:
