Weather & Transportation

At a base valley elevation of 4500 feet above sea level, the winter weather in Salt Lake is unpredictable. Guests should plan on temperature ranges from 32 F / 0 C to 10 F / -12 C, with the possibility of severe winter storms.

For about 7-10 days in the January time frame, Salt Lake also experiences severe inversion. This is caused by warm air in the upper atmosphere trapping cooler and polluted air in the valley. Given the time frame of the face-2-face, this inversion period should be over. However, if it is still in effect, guests can find warm sunny blue skies up any of the canyons.

Driving in Salt Lake in the winter months can be scary at times due to icy and snow packed roads. Please allow extra time to drive to and from the airport safely and to get to the office each day.

If you are planning to stay and ski on Friday or through the weekend, you MUST reserve a 4-wheel drive vehicle. The canyon check points will prevent any vehicle without 4-wheel drive from entering the canyon during storms. Please reserve one early, as availability runs out quickly. Your other option is to park at the mouth of the canyon and pay to take a UTA ski bus.

Stay and Ski Option

There are four ski resorts within about 45 minutes of the office. An additional three more resorts are within 90 minutes of the office. Utah is known for some of the best powder skiing in the world. Ski resorts in Salt Lake can see overnight winter storms that produce up to four feet of fresh snow.

The four closest resorts to the facility are:

Alta - <http://www.alta.com/>

Snowbird - <http://www.snowbird.com/>

Solitude - <https://skisolitude.com/>

Brighton - <http://www.brightonresort.com/>

The Canyons, Park City, and Deer Valley are also great options, but they are a bit further away.

For those staying to ski, I will be heading up to Alta Ski Resort on Friday and Saturday mornings. If desired, I can meet you there to show you around and help you navigate the mountain. Alta is a ski-only resort (Deer Valley is, also). All other resorts allow skiing and snowboarding. Please see each of the individual resort's website for ticket pricing, trail maps, and additional information. In general, an all-day lift ticket will cost between $90-140 depending on the resort.

If you are not bringing your own skis, boots, helmet, and other gear, you can always rent them in the valley or up at the resort. It is best to make your equipment reservations well in advance and plan on picking them up the night before if you are renting in the valley, or early in the morning if at the resort.

Accommodations

If you wish to change accommodations on Thursday night to be closer to the resort, most resorts have lodging at the resort or you can find lodging at the mouth of the canyons.

Travel to Resorts

If you are not staying at a resort, you will want to leave early in the morning to travel up the canyons. You will need to leave around 7:00 AM even though most resorts do not open until 9:00. If you wait and leave around 8:00 you can spend 2 hours in traffic trying to get up the canyons.

UTA (Utah Transit Authority) runs "Ski Buses" up the canyons as well. Most of them pick up at the mouth of the canyon. Please see their site for more information: <https://www.rideuta.com/>
